Why Mokena Cannot Build A New School

In taking up the question of a new building, a new home for our Mokena school, we must consider it as a man does in deciding to build a new home. All the questions that occur to him in making a decision come under two headings; first, "Does he need a new home?" second, "Can he afford a new home?"

Under the first question we have many interesting points to consider. Would a new building improve our children's chances for doing excellent work? I grant, we all enjoy working under good conditions with the best and most modern equipment which it is possible to obtain, but can the teachers not make up for this lack by a greater effort on their part? From a physical standpoint, will a new school insure better ventilation, more even temperature and humidity?

Would our children's safety in time of storm or fire be better protected by a new building? Will the children be safer at play with a school differently situated?

Will a new school raise our standards of school work as a new home raises our standards of living?

Will our children's sense of the beautiful and the artistic be better satisfied? Will a new school prove more inspiring to our teaching force and give them a chance for better work? In other words will our children be uplifted mentally and in a certain sense spiritually by a new school?

My colleagues will prove to you that the answer to these questions is "NO".

I am suggesting the questions as they will occur to any person interested in the idea of a new school, whether they are parents, concerned with the welfare of their children or if they are taxpayers counting the cost in dollars and cents.

On the other hand, we have our second question to consider. There are in Mokena no people of unlimited wealth who can afford to build without counting the cost. Mokena is a community of so called middle class people. We have to balance our needs with our financial resources.

We must not build beyond our means. In making a move of this kind there is always a day of reckoning and good sense tells us to meet that day before starting to build, not afterward.

You have all had an example of the man who built beyond his means. Who envies him because of a beautiful home which he could not afford to build? How many sleepless nights and worried days does he spend? No man can succeed if he goes beyond his depth in debt and neither can any village. My Colleagues will show you that Mokena would be in the embarrassing position of the man who bit off more than he could chew. They will prove to your satisfaction that Mokena does not need a new school building; that Mokena cannot afford a new school building. (Personally, I am heartily in favor of a new school building for Mokena.)

Mokena To Extend Water Main System

Mokena is preparing for much activity in the recently annexed McIntosh subdivision. Extending the village water mains to the subdivision is the first move. The village has a local board of improvements who will take charge of the improvements to be made. The village have engaged the firm of Koelker & Doe as the village engineers who will outline and make all necessary blue prints for the work to be done.

It is proposed to improve the present water system by eliminating all dead ends and making it one continuous circulating system. At the meeting of the village board on Wednesday night, blue prints of the new system were submitted by the engineers. All the improvement work is to be done under the special assessment plan. The engineering firm above mentioned are also serving in a like capacity for Orland Park and Tinley Park.

Work on the new water system will start early in the spring. Much home building activity is to be witnessed in the new subdivision according to present indications.

Mokena M. E. Once Had a Resident Pastor

The soon-coming 60th Anniversary of the Mokena M. E. Church, which is to be celebrated with a series of elaborate meetings with the finest array of speakers that has been heard in Mokena during one season in a long time, calls to memory many events of the past to the old-timers of the community.

One interesting thing that has come to light during Rev. Glen T. Beatty's search for historical material concerning the church at Mokena, is that despite the smallness of the membership today, Mokena was at one time the headquarters for the resident pastor who served several outlying preaching points. At one time the house which is now the property of Mrs. Mary Moriarity, and sits on the corner lot opposite of the Methodist Church, was the Parsonage property of the local congregation. It was quite a thing for so small a village to have a parsonage in those days—back in the '60ties, '70ties, and '80ties, and entitled the local church to have the larger part of the preacher's time, though he served several other congregations.

In a recent letter from Dr. J. R. Woodcock, who was pastor at Mokena in 1883 and 1884, the writer tells us that he preached at Orland and Gooding's Grove as his principal points, and the circuit was 23 miles around, which he covered with horse and buggy.

At various other times of its history, the Mokena Church was served jointly by the same pastors with various other charges. Other churches served with Mokena at some time or another during the sixty years are: Tinley Park, New Lenox, Frankfort, and Trinity M. E. Church, Joliet. A goodly interest is being shown by the people of these various churches in the announced celebration of the Anniversary, and large groups of people are expected to come to Mokena to enjoy the fine programs which are being arranged.

Orland Park May Organize P. T. A.

A movement is on foot to organize a Parent-Teachers Association at Orland Park. It is felt that such an organization would be a fine thing toward creating a better understanding between the teachers, parents and the school board.

Frankfort Man Hit By Engine

George Hanson, a section laborer on the E. J. & E. at Frankfort was struck by an engine a mile east of the Frankfort station, but the train crew not knowing they had hit anyone did not stop. Mr. Hanson was picked up by the members of the section gang and rushed to the Frankfort station and was taken by Herbert Lambrecht to the Silver Cross hospital by auto. It was found upon arriving at the hospital that Mr. Hanson had sustained four broken ribs close to the spine besides other injuries. He will be confined to the hospital for six or eight weeks according to latest reports. Mr. Hanson has been working for several years on the section under Manson LaHue.

Prices On New Fords Announced

The latest advices from Detroit, are that the prices of the Tudor sedan, $495; Fordor sedan, $570; coupe, $495; sport coupe, $550; phaeton, $395; roadster, $385; roadster with pickup body, $395; chassis, $325.

Truck prices: Truck chassis, $460; with cab, $545; with cab and express body, $600; with cab and stake body, $610; with cab and platform body, $695.

The prices, given out by the Ford Company, represent an increase over the old model T with the exception of the Tudor sedan, which remains the same.

The old four-door sedan sold for $25 less. The new coupe costs $10 more. The new sport coupe is an innovation. The phaeton, or touring car, costs $15 more, the new roadster $35 more and the new roadster with pickup body $15 more.

The pleasure car was demonstrated before newspaper men today in an elaborate obstacle test.

Through blinding eddies of snow and over rutty roads, rim deep in mud, the car was driven at sixty-two miles an hour, twirled about, brought to abrupt halts and taken around curves at a terrific pace.

At the conclusion of the demonstration, Edsel Ford in charge of the ceremonies, was besieged with questions regarding the secret of the leverage of the machine. It was explained as due to a combination of new elements which were previously announced.

It is expected that production will increase 1,000 per day per month reach 1,000 per day by January and after that, Mr. Ford said.

Thieves Break In Miller Home At New Lenox

New Lenox had a burglar scare last Tuesday night when an unsuccessful attempt was made to enter the Wm. Gullickson home. Later the Henry Miller home was robbed.

About 3 o'clock Wednesday morning Mr. Gullickson heard some one stamping on his porch and heard the sound of a key being put in the door lock. He called out "Who's there?" but there was no answer and instead he heard the sound of someone running. He saw a man clad in a grey overcoat running from his place. Mr. Gullickson turned his dog loose and he chased the burglar for several blocks.

At the Henry Miller home entrance was gained thru a down stairs window. An overcoat of Mr. Miller's, dresses, draperies, etc., were stolen. A new dress which Mrs. Miller had not worn was taken but was dropped in the yard by the robber. Mr. Miller did not know his home was robbed until morning.

Mrs. Wm. Mooney saw an auto parked in front of the M. E. church early in the morning and it is tho't the robber must have had an accomplice who waited for him. No trace was found of the robbers.

All Set For Ford Demonstration

The big Red Letter Day in the automobile industry comes Friday Morning, December 2nd when the long awaited and much talked about new Ford car will be shown for the first time to an anxious public.

Cooper and Hostert, Ford dealers at Mokena have been busy for sometime getting their garage ready for the big event. The interior has been newly painted and decorated. The show room has been closed for the past week while the interior was being made ready for the exhibition of the long awaited new Ford.

An open house will be held all day Friday commencing at 8 a. m. and continuing until night. Cards will be passed out which prospective buyers can fill out for further information and demonstration of the new Ford.

Cooper and Hostert are running two display advs. in this issue on the new Ford. Be sure and read them.

All interested in the new Ford should be on hand on the day of the demonstration and learn of the car that promises to revolutionize the automobile industry.

Palos Park Has Murder Mystery

Palos Park has a murder mystery. Last Sunday, Peter Theres, aged 31 years, who has been staying with a sister in Palos Park, was found in a dying condition at 95th Street and Keane Avenue. He was taken to the Archer hospital at Summit where he died Monday morning without regaining consciousness.

He had lived at 4242 Artesian avenue and the neighborhood in which the beaten man had lived has long been the chosen territory of the notorious McErlane-Saltis and Ralph Sheldon beer gangs and that Theres may have run afoul of them or some of the gambling syndicates that are battling for control was regarded as not impossible.

Long Lost Son Returns Home

Mr. and Mrs. George Schreiber had a real happy Thanksgiving Day when their son Louis of whom they had not heard a word since he left Tinley Park six years ago, came out from Chicago to spend Thanksgiving at home. After he left Tinley Park he went out west and worked in many western states. His parents sought in vain to get a trace of him and gave him up as dead. A few days before Thanksgiving Mr. Schreiber was surprised to get a letter from his long lost son saying he was in Chicago and would be home for Thanksgiving. When he came he left his address in Chicago. He is driving an ice wagon in the city.

Tinley Park Is Planning A Big Community Xmas

The Tinley Park Garden Club met Friday evening in the Gift Shop and plans were made and discussed for the Christmas tree program on Christmas eve and for the children's party as well.

The tree is yet to be electrically equipped, the children's party to be carried out with a gift for every child; this will necessitate more money than is in the club's treasury at the present time; the following letter by the club's president, Mrs. Wm. Funk may interest many who feel a personal interest in what this club is trying to do:

To Our Town Folks:

Realizing there are many people who would like to contribute to so splendid a cause as our club is now trying to do for the community, the strangers who pass thru our town, and for the children who mean so much to us all, therefore boxes are being placed in stores where you may deposit any amount of money you feel inclined to give.

Philology Tells Story of Long-Vanished Race

Somewhere, and so long ago that it is equally impossible to say when, there dwelt in Europe or Asia a most remarkable tribe of mankind, says a writer in the Kansas City Times. These people are not mentioned in any ancient history and no legend gives a hint of their existence. Not even an authentic grave of one of its members can be traced.

Yet this ante-legendary race has been raised from the dark past and displayed in its ancient shape until modern historians know as much of it as of many peoples yet living. The words spoken by that mysterious race, the gods it worshiped, the laws it made, the character of its industries and possessions, its family and political relations, even the conditions of its intellectual development and its racial characteristics, are all well known.

These people were the fathers of the so-called Aryans, who in growing numbers swelled beyond the boundaries of their ancestral home and went forth to conquer and possess the earth. Knowledge of this ancient race has been brought about solely by workers in comparative philology—the study of words. Word by word the language of the original Aryans has been exhumed from the descendant modern languages until, pieced together, they tell the story of a vanished people.

Famous for Ability to Design Furniture

Important as an influence on furniture forms of Eighteenth century America was the work of the four Adam brothers of England, chiefly the work of Robert Adam, whose influence on the furniture of England from 1760 to 1780 was marked.

He was a man of means, a traveler, but he was not a cabinet maker. He never made a piece of furniture in his life, though it is on his furniture that his fame rests. When he designed a house he also designed the furniture to go in it, even going so far as to mark chalk spots on the floors to show where each piece of furniture was to stand. His designs were painstaking, exquisite in the spirit of antiquity, says Sarah Lockwood, author of "Antiques."

He drew his inspiration directly from ancient Pompeii, uninfluenced by his trip through France. His furniture legs were straight, his lines were straight, his backs round or oval. His decoration was purely classic; he often employed the well known classic urn. Adam may have snubbed Chippendale, for not one trace of Adam's influence is found in the other's work.—Exchange.

Islanders Evade Tax

Eddy Island, off the coast of Galway, Ireland, is so close to shore that its few inhabitants can observe boats leaving the mainland and prepare an appropriate reception for visitors. Nobody on the island has paid anything toward the maintenance of the Galway county council for years, and the last time bailiffs landed the inhabitants repulsed them. Little possibility exists of seizing the cattle on the island as they are driven to almost inaccessible hiding places when bailiffs appear. The islanders owe the county about $100,000.—New York Times.

The bureau of education says the school term extends over a period of 180 days in Italy (exclusive of Sundays and holidays); 215 days in Estonia; over 200 in Germany; over 200 in France; 202 in Czechoslovakia; 227 in Hungary; 200 in Lithuania; 250 in Denmark; 200 in Finland; from October 1 to July 21 in Portugal, with six to eight weeks' vacation; from September 1 to May 30 in Latvia, with four weeks' vacation; from October 1 to June 15 in Spain.

"MILLINERY CONFECTIONS" AGAIN; NOVELTY VELVET SCORES HIGH

Glitter and Color in Hats.

THE theory that millinery "undorned is adorned the most" is passing. After so long a period of exaggerated simplicity, the feminine love for the beautiful asserts itself and once more we are to be hatted in "millinery confections" that are beguiling in detail as well as flattering in becomingness.

Evidently it is devolving upon the little brimless types to convey the message of more charm, more artful handcraft, more novelty for millinery of the future. At any rate they are doing a noble part toward creating a vogue of greater elaboration.

For the millinery collection here pictured, it will readily be seen that hats for midwinter wear are coming out strong in point of glitter and color and intriguing handwork as well as unique design.

The interesting item about the black velvet toque at the top of the group is its curious animal ornament of rhinestones. These quaint jeweled dogs, such as shown here, also birds, beetles and the like, are very much in fashion. They are really extremely smart and so ornamental that little or no other trimming is required.

A clever thing about the other hats here shown is the unique side-dip or wraps, formal or informal, costume ensembles sports or dressy, from negligees to hats, bags, shoes or sofa cushions, emphasis is placed on velvet in the mode—and would you believe it, Paris is now designing parades of velvet for resort "use." Note this, too, if you please, in regard to the prestige of velvet among fashionables—a census of evening gowns worn at the premiere of grand opera this season in our own metropolitan cities, declares the fact the more than half were of velvet.

Furthermore velvet is writing new pages into its history which has to do with startling novelty and diversity, which is another reason why we are so intensely interested in this beloved material. Just now young girls are getting a thrill out of cunning short jackets made of multi-colored velvet print, after the manner of the "darling" model which the charming and well-known cinema artist, Marion earlap effects they display. Most of the new skullcaps trend that way.

Each of these models emphasizes the vogue for intriguing detail and elaboration. The hat to the left shows one of the flower-like ornaments made of tiniest colorful glass beads, interwoven with glittering tinsel.

Handsome headwork and braiding beautify the velvet hat to the right. Its unique helmet-like contour betrays newest fashion.

To the left below an intricate designing of gold beads and metallic threadwork transforms a simple velvet toque into a "thing of beauty and a joy forever."

The last chapeau in the group is even handsomer than the one before it, if such be possible. It reveals a clever patterning of tiny gold beads, which again stresses the elegance trend.

There's simply no getting away from velvet this season. It weaves its spell of enchantment in every nook of fashion's sphere. From gowns,

Another Child at the Inn—by Patience Eden

"WHERE have you been my son?" his mother said,

"You ran away from me . . . it's time for bed!" She shook him gently, ruffling back his hair And led him stumbling up the broad, stone stair.

"Where have you been?" she asked him in surprise,

Finding a sweet dazed look within his eyes, As if he had been blinded by a light So strange and beautiful, that all his sight Swam in a distant glory. Then the boy Looked up at her, his rosy face all joy,—

"The cattle stood around and ate the hay," He said, "and there a tiny baby lay. A tiny baby, mother, and I stared Through one small crack . . . but no one saw or cared."

The baby's mother smiled, and all was gold Around him like a light . . . and very old, Rich men did worship him upon their knees." He paused, then pointing, cried,—"Oh, mother, please

Look out and see that shining, shining star! How big and bright it is! How wide and far It sends the light!" So then they both drew near

The window to look out. "And can't you hear Sweet singing, mother? Tell me, are there white, White wings . . . and angels flying through the night?"

The child grew drowsy and his curly head Drooped like a flower. Gently to his bed His mother carried him. And there she stayed Kneeling beside him, happy yet afraid.

The HOLIDAY GUEST by Elizabeth Blessing

THE plum pudding was ripening, and the guest room was prettier with the yellow drapes than I had ever dreamed it could be, and even the mistletoe hung in all the doorways—all there was left to do was to put the guest towels in the bathroom. As I was taking two of my daintiest hand-embroidered towels from the linen chest, it occurred to me to ask my husband just how his sister Willa looked, since I had never seen her, and was going to all the trouble of arranging theater, bridge, and dancing parties for her during her Christmas visit with us.

"Well," Charles had hesitated, "I told you once that she was a 'home girl' and old-fashioned."

"But that's very indefinite," I had replied. "How tall is she?"

"Oh-a, she's about five feet, six—about your height, and has long, red hair—I suppose it's still long, and she's rather fat, and—"

"Fat," I had gasped, "your sister fat?" And then I had visions of Raymond Garfield's expression when he should see standing under the mistletoe, this old-fashioned, fat, red-headed girl who was to be his partner at all of the parties.

"Surely, Charles, you don't remember well."

"Yes, she is fat," Charles went on, "and although she has money from four years of teaching, she always wears a faded blue serge suit with a belt, and—" The doorbell's ringing interrupted him.

"I'll answer it," I said.—A telegram! and tearing it open, I read: "Meet me at 2:15 at the Union depot—Willa."

It would be a two-hour trip; so I picked up some Christmas cards, and my gold fountain pen with my initials "W. W." on it. I could spend part of the time on the train addressing cards.

I couldn't possibly miss her—the fat, red-headed school teacher in faded blue serge—with a belt, I thought as I settled in my seat.

I stepped from the train conscious of the patronizing attitude I had assumed, but nowhere could I see anyone answering Willa's description.

It was nearly five o'clock when I reached the last store, where I had no charge account, but where my check would be accepted. I felt for my fountain pen. It was gone! Frantically I searched my pockets for it, carelessly laying my purchases on the counter.

"Step aside please, Madam, you are holding up the line," politely requested the cashier as a stylish, tall blonde took my place, and before my dismayed eyes took out a pen exactly like mine. I remembered Charles had once told me that often thieves were better dressed nowadays than others. "She easily could have picked my pocket while we were standing in line," I reasoned. Hence, convinced that she had my pen, I demanded that the cashier examine the pen and see if it had my monogram, "W. W." on it. It had!

"I will let the lady off easy," I thought as I noticed the costly serge of her modish suit, "because she is probably a kleptomaniac whose—"

"There is some mistake," a clear sweet voice interrupted my thoughts.

" . . . I thought as I Settled in My Seat."

"This is my own pen, and 'W. W.' stands for my name, Willa Woodrow."

"Willa Woodrow," I gasped. "This girl!" Then hiding my true thoughts, I hastened to greet her, explaining: "I'm Willa Woodrow, Charles' wife."

I wrote my check while Willa put things back into my pockets, and we walked from the store together.

"But, Willa dear," I exclaimed after we were on the car, "Charles said 'red hair, and fat.'" And I added mentally, "faded blue serge."

"Exactly, dear—look at me," Willa commanded.

"I'm looking," I smiled, "but what I see is fluffy golden hair crowning a plump, but not too plump, pink-and-white face from which shine two magic blue eyes, and—"

Then I remembered the holiday parties I had planned for Charles' "home-like, old-fashioned" sister, and I pictured the fascinated gleam which would come into Raymond Garfield's eyes when he saw Willa standing under the mistletoe.

Drugs Excite the Kidneys, Drink Water

Take Salts at First Sign of Bladder Irritation or Backache

The American men and women must guard constantly against kidney trouble because we often eat too much rich food. Our blood is filled with acids which the kidneys strive to filter out; they weaken from overwork, become sluggish, the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache, or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or if you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, begin drinking lots of good soft water and get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer are a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

The BABY

No mother in this enlightened age would give her baby something she did not know was perfectly harmless, especially when a few drops of plain Castoria will right a baby's stomach and end almost any little ill. Fretfulness and fever, too; it seems no time until everything is serene.

That's the beauty of Castoria; its gentle influence seems just what is needed. It does all that castor oil might accomplish, without shock to the system. Without the evil taste. It's delicious! Being purely vegetable, you can give it as often as there's a sign of colic; constipation; diarrhea; or need to aid sound, natural sleep.

Just one warning: it is genuine Fletcher's Castoria that physicians recommend. Other preparations may be just as free from all doubtful drugs, but no child of this writer's is going to test them! Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold.

Children Cry for

No More Croup!

Sudden-frightening-spasmodic croup comes at night without warning when it is impossible to find a doctor. Minutes count. Have on hand this well known physician's prescription which brings relief without vomiting in 15 minutes. It is also the quickest known relief for cough, cold and whooping cough. In use for 35 years, with largest sales of any croup remedy. If you have children get a bottle of this time-tried remedy at your drug store. Be prepared to open the dangerously clogged throat the instant an attack arrives.

STATE CAPITOL NEWS

Hiram L. Williamson, Secretary, Illinois Press Association

The state of Illinois will have but slightly less than $200,000 to distribute among the county fairs next year as the result of having encroached on the 1928 allotment to the extent of $23,169.48. State funds paid fairs this year a total of $243,169.48, exceeding all past records. The state department of agriculture, which has charge of the distribution of the funds, had a limit of $440,000 to distribute among county fairs for both this year and next. If the fairs pay as much in premiums next year as they did this season, they will receive only their pro-rated share of the balance available. "Fair officials will do well next season," Director Standard of the department of agriculture states, "to keep their premium offerings within bounds. It has been repeatedly pointed out to them that increased premiums would cause a deficit in the appropriation, and that this department is without authority to pay more than the legislature authorizes, $440,000, which, we find, is the most liberal appropriation of its kind in the United States."

The state division of highways let the contract recently for the construction of two bridges on route 116, in Livingston county, to the Indiana Road Paving company, Rochester, Ind. The cost of the bridge on section 113B was $19,963.44 and the one on section 114B was $7,048.56.

Business men of Illinois are beginning to realize the potential trade possibilities of the Pan-American countries and great interest is being evidenced in the second Caribbean sea cruise being sponsored by the Illinois Chamber of Commerce. John H. Camlin, Chicago, is president of the organization. According to government figures this immediate foreign territory now absorbs more than 13 per cent of the exports of the United States. The coming good will trade tour of the state chamber has as its purpose the development of foreign trade for Illinois manufacturers. The party will leave Chicago January 26 on the Panama Limited of the Illinois Central and will sail January 28 on the United Fruit steamer Cartago for the sea voyage of 21 days.

August 18 to 25 are the dates for the 1928 Illinois state fair, according to an announcement issued recently by the state department of agriculture. In accordance with established custom, the Kankakee Inter-State fair, of which Gov. Len Small is secretary, will be held during the preceding week, August 13-17. Other fairs with this information, will formulate their plans for 1928, according to Stillman J. Stanard, director of agriculture, and by January 11 and 12, when the Illinois Association of Agricultural Fairs convenes in Quincy, a schedule of dates for a formidable list of Illinois expositions will be announced. Early in December, officials of state meet in Chicago, and at that time will announce the dates for the nation's greatest agricultural expositions. After discussing with the governor, plans for the 1928 Illinois state fair, Director Stanard announces that further improvements at the state fair grounds are contemplated. Plans whereby the beauty of the grounds will be enhanced are receiving careful consideration, he states, and the increasing list of exhibitors will find improved facilities in the way of permanent improvements.

Harold Holmes, who recently won the Illinois corn husking contest in spite of the handicap of a boil on his hand, took fourth place in the national contest at Winnebago, Minn., a few days ago. Holmes husked a total of 13.9 bushels, but was seriously hindered by a coating of sleet on the ears of corn. Holmes actually husked but 31 pounds less than Fred Stanek, twenty-eight-year-old Iowa farmer, who won the national contest. Holmes has a record of husking more corn in this state than any other state title holder.

Illinois has eight streams which are commercially navigable, the Illinois river being the largest. It is navigable from LaSalle to Grafton, a distance of 225 miles.

The America First foundation, fathered by Mayor William Hale Thompson of Chicago, has been granted a charter by Secretary of State Emmerson. The object of the organization is to teach the fundamental principles of the government and to place in all homes "the priceless document of our constitution." The incorporators are Mayor Thompson, Henry Paschen, John J. Murphy, Christian Paschen and Linus Long.

County treasurers are entitled to 1 per cent of the money realized from the sale of road bonds when they receive the money and an additional 1 per cent when they pay the money out of the treasury, Attorney General Oscar F. Carlstrom ruled in an opinion made recently. His opinion was given in reply to a query from the state's attorney of Saline county, who wished an interpretation of the law in regard to the treasurer's authority to collect commission on road bonds and whether the county board could forbid him to make such collections.

Illinois, according to the maps made by soil surveyors, once had 15,000,000 acres of timber, about 42 per cent of its area being wooded. This timber played its part in the progress and development of the state, building the houses and barns of the farmers and furnishing fence rails or fencing for their fields. Undoubtedly in clearing the land in pioneer times, many good logs were piled up and burned because there was no market for the timber.

Recent surveys show that there remains of this original timber, which perhaps ran from 3,000 to 12,000 board feet per acre, 3,021,075 acres. The total upland timber amounts to 2,281,724 acres, and bottomland to 718,146 acres; while there are 21,000 acres of cypress, 220 of pine and 157 acres of tamarack. The cypress is found in the tributaries of the Ohio and Mississippi rivers, the pine in Ogle county in the north and Union county in the south, and the tamarack mainly in Lake county. Of the total, fully 90 per cent is on farms, and in the form of wood lots. In some cases the farmer may know how to make a profit handling timber, in others he may need advice and assistance, which he can secure by writing the state forester at Springfield. Some states employ a farm forestry specialist working under the extension department of the state university to give advice and assistance to farmers under Section 5, of the Clark-McNary law.

The present bottomland timber lies mostly along our streams; they are the finest according to Ridgway and others who have been along the Wabash river and its tributaries. Of the upland timber, which is more or less contiguous, there are three regions, one comprising the bluffs along the Mississippi river from central Alexander to central Monroe county, another in southwest Gallatin, southeast Saline and eastern Pope and Hardin counties and another in Calhoun and western Jersey counties. Calhoun being a narrow upland county between the Illinois and Mississippi rivers, a good fruit as well as a good forest region. In these three regions there are estimated to be 336,000 acres.

Construction of Route 104 extending from Jacksonville to Meredosia was urged by a delegation of residents from Jacksonville, Chapin and Meredosia at a conference with Governor Small recently. It was indicated that a hearing on the highway will be held soon and the road may become a part of the building program of next spring. The proposed road extends west from Jacksonville through Chapin and on to Meredosia, where it connects with a proposed highway to Mt. Sterling. A majority of the delegation which met with the governor, Col. C. R. Miller, director of public works and buildings, and Frank T. Sheets, chief highway engineer, urged early construction on what they called "a most important outlet to the Illinois river."

More than 200 delegates from Pike and Calhoun counties, seeking early action toward completion of hard-road links, were in conference with Governor Small and members of the state division of highways at the state house. Members of the state legislature from the thirty-six senatorial district, headed by A. Otis Arnold of Quincy, and Carroll Bush of Pittsfield, were included in the delegation.

Barry, Pittsfield, Griggsville, Kinderhook, Milton, Pearl, Rockport, Hull, Detroit, Kampsville and Hardin were among the towns represented in the delegation. The routes on which early construction was urged were: Route 106 from Route 26, west of Kinderhook to the Hannibal bridge; Route 107, from Griggsville through Pittsfield to the new bridge across the Mississippi river at Louisiana, which is a link in one of the federal highways; Route 100 from Detroit through Milton, Pearl and on to Kampsville, where it connects with the Calhoun hard road and leads to the proposed bridge at Hardin, thus giving Calhoun county its only outlet to the outside state. Quincy and other cities are boosting the route as it will give a direct and short paved route to St. Louis.

NEW LAWS OF ILLINOIS

[This is the conclusion of the list of bills that were passed by the Fifty-first general assembly and have received the signature of Governor Small, or have been allowed to become laws without his signature.]

House Bill 754 (committee on appropriations). Appropriates $527,553.35 to pay claims in conformity with the awards and recommendations made by the court of claims.

House Bill 756 (Browne). Legalizes and validates for the survey, laying out, and letting of contracts for the construction of a hard-surfaced road over and along line "A" of Route No. 23 of the state hard road system. Emergency.

House Bill 721 (Committee on Appropriations). Amends section 12 of an act to revise the law in relation to fugitives from justice, February 16, 1874. Authorizes the governor to offer a reward of not exceeding $1,000 instead of $200.

House Bill 755 (committee on appropriations). Levies a tax of $18,000,000 on the assessed value of property of the state for general state purposes for the year 1927, and levies a tax of $8,000,000 upon the assessed taxable property of the state for the year 1927 for state school purposes.

LESSON TEXT—Isa. 5:1-23.

GOLDEN TEXT—Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction and to keep himself unspotted from the world.

PRIMARY TOPIC—How to Please God.

JUNIOR TOPIC—A Life That Pleases God.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—A Life That Pleases God.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Elements of Right Living.

I. Israel, the Favored Nation (vv. 1-7).

Their unique relation to God is presented under the figure of a vineyard. Observe:

1. God's peculiar favor (vv. 1, 2). God did for this nation what He did for no other nation in the history of the world. He evidenced it when He assigned the boundaries of Israel's inheritance (see Num. 34:1-13).

He gathered out the stones when the Canaanites were exterminated. The choicest vine which was planted therein was the Israelitish nation which had gone through the disciplinary process in Egyptian bondage. He built a tower in it when under David Jerusalem was made its capital city.

2. The obligation of the nation (vv. 3-7).

The purpose of a vineyard is to bear fruit. The object of the husbandman in planting a vineyard and nurturing it is that it might bear fruit. The purpose of God in the selection and the blessing of the Israelitish nation was that it might bring forth fruit to His glory.

3. It bore only wild grapes (v. 4).

4. The desolation of the vineyard (vv. 5-7).

Since all efforts had been wasted, the owner of the vineyard now resolves to abandon it to the wild beasts of the forest.

II. The Sins Which Brought Ruin to the Nation (vv. 8-23).

The causes of this destruction are presented under six woes, each woe pronounced against a particular sin.

1. Monopoly and oppression of the poor (vv. 8-10).

The crime against which the first woe was denounced is that of the avaricious grasping after property which leads to the accumulation of wealth in the hands of the few. "Joining house to house" and "laying field to field" means the sin of the greedy monopolist who in the agricultural district takes the form of the land grabber, in the commercial centers, the form of the big men crushing out the small ones.

2. Dissipation (vv. 11-17).

The sin here denounced is drunkenness. Several features are connected with this one sin.

(1) Drinking made the life business of some (v. 11).

They get up early and continue until late at night, until their whole being is inflamed.

(2) The effort to give their hellish business a show of refinement (v. 12).

This is why pleasing music is heard pouring forth from the dens of infamy over our land.

(3) Blindness to God's warnings and judgments (v. 12).

Their drinking and dissipation rendered them insensible to the dealings of Providence.

(4) God's judgments for such sins (vv. 13-17).

They went into captivity. The immediate cause assigned is ignorance, but it is a willful ignorance for which they are held responsible. They not only go into captivity, but there is great mortality among those who drink (v. 14). The records everywhere show a much higher death rate among drinking men. Drinking degrades all classes (v. 15). The country itself was made a waste (vv. 18, 19). So daring do they become that they defy the judgments of the Almighty (v. 19).

3. Moral confusion (v. 20).

This woe is pronounced against those who try to adjust moral conditions to suit their sensual appetites.

4. Conceit (v. 21).

The fifth woe is pronounced against the sin of self-conceit. Many today have become so affected by sin that they are unable to make moral discriminations. Having a false estimate of their own wisdom they plan and act without reference to God.

5. Perversion of justice (vv. 22, 23).

The sixth woe is denounced against those who are in places of justice as judges. Because of their lack of moral discrimination, and because of desire for temporal gain they cause justice to miscarry.

Treatment of Sin

Use sin as it will use you. Spare it not for it will not spare you. It is your murderer, and the murderer of the world. Use it, therefore as a murderer should be used.—Richard Baxter.

Fear of Mistakes

Some of us know what it is to be miserably afraid of making mistakes in our work. How graciously He meets this with "I will direct their work in truth."—Frances Ridley Havergal.

Planes Make Desert Trip Simple Matter

What could Aladdin's carpet do that was more wonderful than rise from the desert sands like the circling genii from the bottle and whisk toward the glowing east, while the pilgrims of laden caravans rubbed their eyes at the apparition and wondered if a mirage had taken wings? Here is the fairy tale come true at last. Vanished is the land trail marked by bleached bones where men strove and agonized in the red dust and the hot breath of the desert, in the hope of the water-hole and the date palms somewhere beyond the forever receding rim of the pitiless inverted sky-bowl imprisoning the heat of a fiery furnace. The flying men have come to find what height they like upon the airways, and favoring winds or cooler temperatures. In hours they equal the weary marches of many days of yore—and one pilot in a plane achieves what a king's sumless treasury and numberless army in the time of Darius could not do.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Greatest Factor in Man's Upward Climb

Heredity counts, of course. But against every example I could cite of innate connection between performance and physical inheritance, I would cite all human history as evidence that social, cultural and physical environmental factors set the stage for every human act. Man became human not because he was born that way but because he learned to act like a human being. The first years were the hardest. It probably took him 50,000 years to learn to talk; you learn in a few months; you can learn more words in ten years than the cave-man had in his dictionary. But we never have been able to paint a better buffalo than he could.—George A. Dorsey, in Cosmopolitan.

Rapid Seeding

Harold Saunders, a rancher and airplane owner in southern Oregon near Memphr, recently planted ten acres of land to winter blue grass, using his airplane. This grass, peculiar to this country, grows from a bulb and it is tossed on the ground and left to mature in the winter and spring. The land was seeded in a few minutes.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCH

A special Thanksgiving service was held in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, last Thursday.

Subject: "THANKSGIVING".
The Golden Text was from Psalm 107:8, "Oh that men would praise the Lord for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men!"

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples. As the Father hath loved me, so have I loved you: continue ye in my love. If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love; even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in his love. These things have I spoken unto you, that my joy might remain in you, and that your joy might be full." John 15:8-11.

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures, by Mary Baker Eddy: "To keep the commandments of our Master and follow his example, is our proper debt to him and the only worthy evidence of our gratitude for all that he has done. Outward worship is not of itself sufficient to express loyal and heartfelt gratitude since he has said: 'If ye love me, keep my commandments.' Simply asking that we may love God will never make us love Him; but the longing to be better and holier, expressed in daily watchfulness and in striving to assimilate more of the divine character, will mould and fashion us anew, until we awake in His likeness."

MOKENA

Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Hall entertained at Thanksgiving dinner last Thursday, the latter's sister and husband, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Gilbert of Detroit, Mich., and brother and family, Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Lockwood and family of New Lenox and Mr. and Mrs. John Clyde of Joliet.

ORLAND

Miss Mary Andresen who has been working in Minneapolis, Minn., has returned home the past week.

A number of the older residents of Orland township are much interested in the coming 60th celebration of the dedication of the Mokena M. E. church as they used to attend this church at one time.

They are planning to attend some of the services which will begin on the evening of December 15 and will be held each night to December 18th.

The heavy rains of the past few days have turned some of the fields and low lands into lakes.

Mrs. Herman Nicolai who has been ill is much improved.

Mrs. W. C. Greve who has been ill is much better.

Mrs. Edgar Cooper has been on the sick list for the past ten days, but is able to be out again.

Mrs. Philip Steffen, Jr., visited in Joliet, Monday.

The Orland Park Woman's club was entertained at the home of Mrs. Quigley, Thursday afternoon.

The case of Rev. W. C. Greve against an assistant Manager of the Armour Co., of Chicago for damages resulting from an auto accident last summer when the Chicago man ran into Rev. Greve's car, is coming up for hearing in Chicago the third Monday in December.

The Chicago man has offered to settle for $200, but this would not pay for the damage to Rev. Greve's car which was completely wrecked and for the injuries sustained by Rev. Greve, which caused him to be laid up in a hospital and prevented him from carrying on his ministerial work since the accident.

Sometime ago it was reported that Orland Park was to get a public play ground equipment from Cook county, but nothing further was heard about the matter. Latest reports, however, are that this equipment will be erected by next spring on a site near to the Orland Park public school.

Howard Hewson is getting his garage in readiness for showing the new Ford car. Mr. Hewson says he has had 5 orders for the new Ford cars even before they have been exhibited to the public.

CHRIST LUTHERAN CHURCH
Rev. W. C. Greve has resumed preaching after being laid up all summer and fall as the result of an auto accident.

The annual Christmas program is being worked on now. The program will be rendered on Christmas Eve. Candies, books, etc., will be distributed to the kiddies. A collection will be taken to defray the expenses of the program.

The Y. P. A. is selling Christmas Stockings to raise $150 which is the amount still due on the pipe organ. This payment will be the final one.

The Ladies Aid society have paid a $480 note on the school. One more note of like amount will be due next fall and this will complete the final payment on this building.

The bunco party held in the Lutheran school by the Ladies Aid Nov. 22nd was a record breaker for attendance and $50 were cleared.

The Mitchell family who went to California sometime ago, report wonderful weather and country.

NEW LENOX

Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Deadmore entertained at a Thanksgiving dinner the following guests: Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wink and family of Lockport, Mr. and Mrs. George Johnston and family, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Johnson and family, Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Deadmore and daughter of Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Haynes and son of New Lenox and Mrs. J. C. Ireson of Abingdon, Virginia, an Aunt of Mr. Deadmore's who has been visiting among her nieces and nephews since September 1st.

The Parent-Teachers association had charge of the dinner at the Wm. Sayers sale Thursday.

A surprise party was held Saturday evening in honor of Irvin Jensen. Bunco was played at seven tables, with prizes awarded Mrs. Alfred Bethell, Miss Margaret Stephen, Alfred Scherpe and Sidney Batson.

John Urch spent Thanksgiving in Chicago with relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Scherpe have returned home after spending two weeks with relatives in Chicago.

Rev. and Mrs. M. Galloway and Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Johnson visited friends in Chicago recently.

Mr. and Mrs. William Werner and Milton Borges passed Thanksgiving in Chicago.

Henry Jensen of Truman, Minn., departed Monday for his home after ter a month's visit with relatives. The Louis Wilson family was entertained at dinner in the home of their daughter, Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Beadle on Thanksgiving.

The R. N. E. G. girls of Joliet were entertained in the home of Mrs. George Bethell.

The John Walsh family had a family reunion Tuesday evening in the Colonial hall in New Lenox.

Music and dancing was the main diversion of the evening. At a late hour a sumptuous dinner was served.

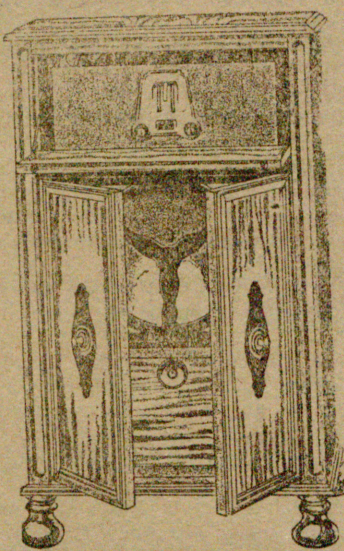

Mr. and Mrs. George Bethell entertained at dinner Thanksgiving Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Yedlacia of Braceville, Mr. and Mrs. Bath, Mr. Margaret and Thomas Bath, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Button, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Bornet and children of Joliet and Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Bethell and daughter Ruth of New Lenox.

INTRODUCING THE NEW FORD CAR

Mokena will get its first full description of the new line of Ford automobiles, Friday, December 2.

A public reception to be held by local dealers is part of the national introduction of the new Ford models. In thousands of communities all over the United States Friday this new line of moderate-priced light automobiles will be introduced to millions of people.

(The doors of the show rooms are to be opened promptly at 8 a. m. and attendants will be on hand throughout the remainder of the day to explain the new and interesting features of the car which is expected to make a new chapter in automotive history.)

The new Ford cars are said to be the product of several years of study and planning by Henry Ford and his engineers in the great Ford laboratories at Dearborn, Mr.

Ford himself has announced that "there is nothing quite like the new Ford car" and has stated that it will prove just as great a pioneer in the present field of low price light cars of quality as the famous Model T was a pioneer in its field for more than nineteen years.

Among the visitors to the reception Friday will be many officials, executives of business, civic and professional organizations and other leaders in the life of the community, who have been specially invited.

The performance of these new cars, it is said, will be startling when viewed in the light of automobile performance of the past.

Local dealers have been notified by Ford officials at Detroit that the factories throughout the country are now preparing to produce the new cars in numbers exceeding even the tremendous production records achieved in the manufacture of the Model T line.

Company officials at Detroit also repeated their early announcement that production of the new Ford line will not make the Model T line obsolete. The manufacture of new parts for Model T replacements will continue to be an important factor of the Ford plants as long as any of the Model T cars are still in operation, the local dealers were advised. Because of this policy, present owners of Model T Ford cars will be able to keep their cars in perfect order as long as those cars remain in commission.

IDLE ISLAND

It might have been a tall, straight, slim young boy who stood alone, far up in the bow of the white steamer as she nosed from island to island in her run up Casco bay; boylike the feet planted squarely in sturdy English walking boots, the hands thrust deep into the pockets of smartly tailored knickers; boylike the set of the straight shoulders in the wine-red suede jacket with the soft silk mannish collar and the showing at the throat; boylike most of all the sleek bobbed head in jaunty leather hat. But all the boyish cast of Gay Delane was given the lie by the softness of her slender face, the delicacy of her throat as it curved into the mannish collar, the dark weariness of her grave eyes, the tired drooping of her fine red lips.

The rest that Gay Delane came seeking in the Northland, she had earned indeed. Years of wilful slavery to paint brushes and palette, dogged persistence at her easel in the face of physical exhaustion, led inevitably to relinquishment of hopes, ambitions and plans, and Gay Delane was obliged to turn the key at last upon her pretty studio in Greenwich Village and go in search of recreating rest among the cooling breezes along the pine-girdled coast of the North.

Her slender sturdy foot was first upon the gangplank, and it was she who led the stream of eager tourists ashore, making her way with impatiently quick assurance to the head car of a line of waiting taxis. Her brisk gesture of intent to ride brought up a tall, fair, freckled lad, who came with slow but willing gait, an ambling roll to his locomotion that was almost seaworthy.

"I want to look at cottages," she said briskly.

"Well—all right," he assented slowly, in the soft New England drawl that curiously harmonized with his walk. Gay thought. He cranked the car and slid into the driver's seat. Gay swung up beside him.

"Now, I'll tell you exactly what I want," she began, "and you can take me to it. A small cottage, preferably, off by itself somewhere, with trees around it, and near the water. Quiet, very quiet. I am going to sleep for two weeks. If I can't find a cottage, I will take a suite of rooms in a private house. With an old couple, if possible, deaf and dumb and a bit crippled, if you have them. No hotel, no boarding house, no summer colony. Now, there it is. First choice, small, quiet, furnished cottage. I don't care if it is only a shed, if it is quiet, and cool, and alone."

"Well, now, that ought to be easy," he said slowly. "How many are there of you?"

"One. Me. Just myself, no more."

"You don't want a house all by yourself."

All of outraged New England convention spoke in his slow low voice.

"Oh, yes, I do. Not a very big house, but a house."

"But you can't stay nights in a house by yourself—"

Gay cut in briskly: "Now, the chances are that I know what I want better than you do. All you have to do is to find it." Then, as she noticed that his eyes fell and a slow flush rose in his fair face at her rebuke, she added pleasantly: "I have lived alone for eight years. In New York, too, that den of depravity. I fancy there is no more rampant danger here than there."

"Another one of them nutty New Yorkers," the boy thought, but his impassive face did not betray him. He drove slowly from house to house, descending on their various virtues, decrying their obvious faults, specifying the number of rooms, the condition of the plumbing and the amount of rent.

Gay was difficult to suit. While her own notion of what she wanted was indefinite enough, she was quick to decide what she did not want. One cottage was too close to neighbors, one was in a swampy marsh, one looked cockroachy.

"I never heard tell of any cockroaches there," he said thoughtfully. "Seems like folks would have mentioned it."

But Gay waved him on.

"There's the Lone Pine," he reflected at last, hard pressed for further resources. "But it's off by itself on the hill, and at the edge of the woods. You'd be afraid there. But it's high and it looks out to sea."

"The Lone Pine," she repeated, and her voice warmed. "I feel the vibration of a responsive chord. Lead me to it."

He stopped the car at last in a narrow lane. A grassy slope rose steeply beyond a small orchard, and crowning the hill, seeming a growth of the rocks themselves like a giant mushroom, a small cottage showed in the fringe of a little wood.

Gay breathed a rapturous "Ah!" She got out without a word, and the lad followed her through the orchard.

"I will have it," she said, looking up with joy in her eyes, "I will have it if I have to commit murder. Those birches are going to sentinel my sleep. Those rocks shall be my anchorage. Murder, arson, theft—what are these to me? The Lone Pine will give me sleep."

"Well, now," he said deprecatingly, with a sidelong look at her flushing

The cottage was built of weather-stained shingle and natural rock, and stood on a ledge where the grassy slope dwindled to solid stone. Before its door stood one twisted, craggy pine, and behind it, so that indeed it stood in its very portal, the little forest of birch and pine rustled and shivered in the sea breeze.

The doors of the cottage were closed and their knocking produced no answer. The lad was loath to accept this inadmission. He knocked and knocked, frowning dissatisfaction at the unfriendly silence.

"Oh, there's nobody here," Gay protested. "Our pounding would have awakened the—the druids by this time."

"She must be here," he insisted. "She's always here. Auntalmiry!" he called. "Auntalmiry!"

Gay laughed at his persistence. "If she's here, she's deaf," she said, and walked around the cottage, from window to window, peering in. And the more her spying showed her, the more warmly she wanted it.

The lower floor of the cottage consisted of one large room, the small kitchen being no more than a glassed-in porch adjoining. It was lined throughout with pine, darkly stained. Windows opened on the four sides of it, to the forest, to the orchard slope and the valley, to the quiet bay, and to the full Atlantic and the farther islands. The room was chastely furnished, with occasional bright splashes of color on the walls or in the upholstery. The fireplace was wide and high, built of island stone, with corner benches of the dark pine.

"A darling fireplace," Gay exulted. "Rand did that. Folks mostly thought he wasted a lot of time on it," the boy vouchsafed pleasantly.

"Come here," Gay called to him. And directing his eyes to a bright corner of the room she said, "Look! Do you see that wide soft couch, with that woolen robe, and the fat cushions? I shall be sound asleep there in twenty minutes. Do you suppose folks would be surprised if I should break the door down and go right in and fall asleep?"

"Well, yes, I rather think maybe they would."

"Now! Take me to its Guardian Angel. But it is mine already. If he—that is the Guardian Angel—wishes to rent it, well and good. Otherwise I shall simply throttle him, and burn his remains in my fireplace. Lead on, MacDuff."

The boy eyed her warily as she marched before him down the grassy slope and through the orchard.

But he reassured her about the cottage. He said the Captain would surely rent it, because it was for rent. Naturally, that settled it. If Gay wanted it, it was hers. And Gay wanted it.

The house to which he took her was but a short distance up the same lane.

"If you make the deal with the Captain you'll get it cheaper," he cautioned her. "But they may try to wish you off on Miss Alice, 'cause she's the administrator, and she holds out for more money. You ask for the Captain and stick to it. You'd better go to the kitchen door, miss. If you go to the front door they'll think you're company."

Gay nodded back at him, smiling, and crossed a velvety lawn to the kitchen door which was opened to her touch by a little old man, very gray, very frail, very gentle. If he felt surprise at sight of the boyish girl in khaki gray and red leather on his step he gave no sign, but in a soft and gentle voice he greeted her.

"May I speak to the Captain?" she began brightly.

"Well, now, I guess you can, seein' 's I'm the Captain myself," he said sociably, and stepped out discreetly to the porch, making as if to close the door behind him.

But his attempted secrecy failed. The closing door was suddenly arrested.

A firm hand appeared in the aperture, and closed upon his arm. The Captain looked back with gentle impatience.

"Lady wishes to consult with me—personally—" he protested mildly.

"Now, Gramp, you wouldn't keep the lady standing," remonstrated a firm voice from within. And the door opened, the Captain was drawn back to the kitchen.

"Come right in, miss, and do excuse our looks, won't you? But it is right in the midst of cleaning and—"

Gay lightly nodded away the need for apology, and sat down on the edge of a little straight chair beside the stove, while the Captain returned to his own big rocker by the window between two cats and a huge dog, who curled his thick lips over his teeth in resentment at this intrusion in his kitchen. The three women retired at once to their work in different parts of the room, and the Captain filled his pipe.

At Gay's eager inquiry he admitted his ownership of the Lone Pine, agreed that it was for rent, and said of course she could have it. Gay beamed upon him joyously, beamed at the unconscious backs of the three women, who, for all their immersion in their household tasks, had missed not so much as a syllable of talk, nor a thread of fringe on Gay's smart knickers.

Suddenly a sharp knock on the kitchen door, which immediately opened from without, and before either face or form appeared, a brisk voice called with a great assumption of good cheer:

"Good morning, all!"

The words were followed by a woman, elderly, but tall and straight, with a face which had carefully schooled its every line to dogged optimism.

"Good morning, all," she repeated, on her full appearance, and added, rather sternly, "Good morning, John."

Then she turned to Gay with elaborate affability. "Good morning, I saw you looking at the Lone Pine, and then as you came on here I knew you wanted it, so I came right over. How lucky you are—the dear little cottage! And cheap, my dear, dirt cheap. Do you want it for the entire season?"

"Well, yes, I think so," Gay turned

Solving One Problem of the Crowded City

"I shall be glad to see Hector, your big Saint Bernard, again," said the visitor to the suburbs as the flivver rolled along.

"Had to get rid of that dog," said the modern suburbanite crisply.

"Bite somebody?"

"No, but he took up too much space. Saint Bernard's almost as big as a calf. Belongs to past age, when people had barnyards and real estate wasn't so valuable. A one-family dog house is economic waste nowadays."

"One-family dog house? You don't mean to say—"

"Surely do. Had dog house remodeled when I got rid of Hector. Found, as I expected, that if I got a compact terrier there'd be a nice

Presumptuous

A newly rich man once invited Beau Brummell, the famous fop, to dinner, and asked him to name his own party. He accepted, and chose to the number of eleven, including himself.

"That," said his host, "will make just an even number."

"An even number?" queried the beau. "How is that?"

"Your friends, ten; yourself and myself—twelve in all."

"Good gad!" said Brummell, affecting surprise. "You surely don't mean you are going to be one of the party!"

Language of Diplomacy

The French language was used extensively in Europe in the Twelfth and Thirteenth centuries. The French literature was greatly developed and spread throughout the various countries, and persons of culture studied the language in order to be able to read the literature. Many foreign students were attracted to the University of Paris, and this also helped to spread the language. As a language for treaties and foreign intercourse among nations, French became general in the time of Louis XIV.

English Cathedral City

Rochester is a cathedral city of Kent, England, on the right bank of the Medway. It really forms one large town together with Chatham and Strood. Charles Dickens, who lived at Gad's Hill, three miles from Rochester, frequently introduces the city into his novels.

Measuring a Man's Blood

Recent tests have shown that when a man gives a quart of blood for a transfusion he parts with more than a fourth of his entire life stream. The average healthy man possesses an amount of blood that is 4.9 per cent, or about one-twentieth of his total weight; thus, if you weigh 160 pounds, you have about eight pounds of blood—a little less than four quarts. The quantity of blood was determined by injecting dye into each subject's circulation. Three minutes later samples of the blood were taken. The extent to which the dye had been diluted showed the amount of blood possessed.

In No Hurry to Marry

Nine years after it had been issued, a marriage license was returned for filing in the office of the District court clerk at Minneapolis, Minn. The license was obtained September 21, 1918, by Joseph Gardner and Agnes Quinn. On October 8 they were married, but would not tell why the license was not used before.

Mothers, Do This—

When the children cough, rub Musterole on their throats and chests. No telling how soon the symptoms may develop into croup, or worse. And then's when you're glad you have a jar of Musterole at hand to give prompt relief.

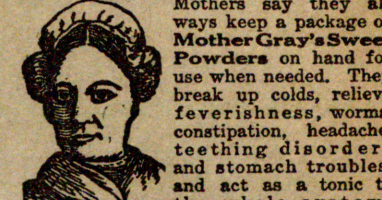

As first aid, Musterole is excellent. Keep a jar ready for instant use. It is the remedy for adults, too. Relieves sore throat, bronchitis, tonsillitis, croup, stiff neck, asthma, neuralgia, headache, congestion, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, pains and aches of back or joints, sprains, sore muscles, chilblains, frosted feet and colds of the chest (it may prevent pneumonia).

To Mothers: Musterole is also made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.

A MOTHER'S PROBLEM

Is how to treat her child who is peevish and fretful, yet not seriously sick. Many Mothers say they always keep a package of Mother Gray's Sweet Powders on hand for use when needed. They break up colds, relieve feverishness, worms, constipation, headache, teething disorders and stomach troubles, and act as a tonic to the whole system. Equally good for older people. Sold by Drug-gists everywhere.

Evening Worship 7:00 P. M.

Next Sunday evening the pastor preaches on the subject: "Ezekiel, the Book of Mystery," which is the third of a series of sermons on the general theme, "Unknown Books of the Bible". These sermons are purely Biblical sermons and are drawing much attention from those who are attending. All will enjoy them.

The Intermediate age of our Sunday School are practicing for a choir which will help furnish special music at the services from Dec. 15th to 18th, which are to celebrate our 60th Anniversary.

The pastor's whole attention is being devoted toward making our Anniversary Services the best possible. Reports from our neighboring villages indicate much interest, and if the weather permits we expect large crowds. Fine co-operation from every side to be noticed, and the pastor appreciates it greatly.

GET THE CHURCH GOING HABIT

Where are you going to church next Sunday?

Your choice church is easily within a short distance of where you reside.

Within a radius of two miles of Tinley Park there are four churches. Two of these churches a Lutheran and a Methodist are located in the town proper, while within striking distance of the town there are two other churches of the same denomination as named above.

Anyone of these churches will be glad to welcome you into the fellowship of their particular church. All people are endowed with religious interests and capable of unusual spiritual powers. Those interests may be dormant due to the fact that they have never been awakened to the great possibilities and responsibilities in life, yet they are there and you owe it to yourself and the Kingdom of God, to give Christ a chance to work with and thru you, to the end that men may be saved.

You are cordially invited to attend all services at the Tinley Park Methodist church. Sunday school at 10 a. m. Mrs. W. R. Wyman, Supt. Preaching at 11 a. m.

J. L. CHANNEY, Pastor.
